

Anthropology | Bachelor of Arts • Bachelor of Science • Minors

Choosing a major in anthropology is both an academic decision and a statement about who you are in the world. Anthropology students are eager to explore our world and examine the complexity, diversity and breadth of our species – through time and across our complex and changing world. Anthropology students want to make a contribution to our world by expanding their perspective and developing sophisticated understandings of other peoples and places.

PROGRAM FEATURES

The skills you develop in our program – research, analysis, communication, foundational global information, and respect and concern for other cultures and peoples – will serve you whether you move on to the workforce, advanced study in anthropology, or study in another field.

The program creates a space for students to explore the human conditions as they develop a more sophisticated understanding and appreciation of human variation across the globe and through time. Students in this program will be well prepared for advanced education in the discipline or well positioned to integrate anthropological knowledge into their future professional endeavors. We encourage students to take advantage of faculty-led fieldwork opportunities in Ethiopia, the Dominican Republic, and Peru. Our bio-archaeology lab and nearby archaeology field school provide hands-on learning. Students become familiar with the application of anthropology working on faculty research projects.

- Anthropology, B.A.
- Anthropology, B.S. – Concentrations:
 - Archaeology | Bilingual Multicultural Education – TESOL MS Accelerated Program*
 - Biological | Cultural | General | Linguistics*
- Minors: Anthropology | Forensic Science | Social Science and Medicine

For more information on program requirements, visit Catalog.SouthernCT.edu/undergraduate

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

Where do anthropologists work? Everywhere! Our Anthropology students choose from a diverse array of career pathways. Those who move on to advanced work in the discipline study at top-tier research institutions. Many of our graduates opt for the challenge of volunteer experiences by serving in the Peace Corps, Americorps, and Teach for America. Other students continue into advanced study in education, teaching English as a Second Language (ESL), history or medicine, and other related disciplines. We have alumni working in cultural resource management, cybermarketing, the forest service, education, forensics, health care, and social work. Some of our alumni have taken their anthropological skills into entrepreneurial ventures and have started their own businesses. One of our graduates runs a wilderness nature school and another has started a business in the travel industry. As globalization increases, so does the need for anthropologists.

FOR MORE INFORMATION

Undergraduate Admissions Office
501 Crescent Street, New Haven, CT 06515 | (203) 392-5644
Admissions@SouthernCT.edu SouthernCT.edu/admissions/undergraduate

Our bio-archaeology lab and nearby archaeology field school provide hands-on learning. Students become familiar with the application of anthropology working on faculty research projects.

Expect more. Be more.
Southern.

